Mercy for our Common Home

"May the works of mercy also include care for our common home"
— Pope Francis

This weekend, we celebrate both Earth Day and Divine Mercy Sunday. One observance is called "secular" and the other "religious," but, aren't both the Earth and mercy things with which each and every one of us maintain relation, regardless of creed?

Pope Francis' September 2016 statement, "Show Mercy to our Common Home," opens with a strong message of universality. After quoting several Christian leaders and organizations, he concludes, "Christians or not, as people of faith and goodwill, we should be united in showing mercy to the earth as our common home and cherishing the world in which we live as a place for sharing and communion."

In an effort to strengthen our relationships with one another and with our Creator God, Pope Francis later proposes a new act of mercy to adopt in our prayer lives and in our lived witness of the faith: care for our common home.

"The Christian life involves the practice of the traditional seven corporal and seven spiritual works of mercy. 'We usually think of the works of mercy individually and in relation to a specific initiative: hospitals for the sick, soup kitchens for the hungry, shelters for the homeless, schools for those to be educated, the confessional and spiritual direction for those needing counsel and forgiveness... But if we look at the works of mercy as a whole, we see that the object of mercy is human life itself and everything it embraces.'

Obviously 'human life itself and everything it embraces' includes care for our common home. So, let me propose a complement to the two traditional sets of seven: may the works of mercy also include care for our common home.

As a spiritual work of mercy, care for our common home calls for a 'grateful contemplation of God's world' which 'allows us to discover in each thing a teaching which God wishes to hand on to us.' As a corporal work of mercy, care for our common home requires 'simple daily gestures which break with the logic of violence, exploitation and selfishness' and 'makes itself felt in every action that seeks to build a better world.'

In response to the new act of mercy — care for our common home — and in observance of this weekend's celebrations, the Global Catholic Climate Movement launched their Mercy2Earth initiative, which encourages Catholic dioceses, parishes, families and individuals to reflect upon the pope's message and put it into action.

The Diocese of Burlington and Holy Family-St. Lawrence Parish's "Green Committee" will host a Mercy2Earth event that responds to both the spiritual and corporal aspects of cultivating this new act of mercy. Participants will gather in the church for an evening prayer service focused on the pope's message of creation care. Following the 30-minute prayer service, there will be roundtable discussion groups in the Holy Family Parish Center. The goal is to learn or share about strategies to focus on creation care in one's parish, home or workplace. Topics include renewable energy, energy efficiency, waste management, clean water, living simply, impacts on communities, eco-spirituality and parish-level organizing. Discussion groups include a parishioner or community member who is experienced in the topic of discussion, able to respond to common questions and provide some resources for further education. The event will conclude with an option to tour the Holy Family Parish Center's "green" kitchen. All are welcome to attend this Earth Day and Divine Mercy Sunday event on April 23, from 5 to 7 pm.

A Prayer for our Common Home

O God of the poor, help us to rescue the abandoned and forgotten of this earth, who are so precious in Your eyes... God of love, show us our place in this world as channels of Your love for all the creatures of this earth, God of mercy, may we receive Your forgiveness and convey Your mercy throughout our common home. Praise be You! Amen.

— Pope Francis
